THE SOLDIERS' GRAVES.

Strong men fast asleep, With coverlets wrought of clay, Do soft dreams o'er you creep Of friends who are here to-day? Do you know, O, men, low lying In the hard and chilly bed, That we, the slowly dying. Are giving a day to the dead? Boys whose glossy hair Grows gray in the age of the grave, Who lie so humbly there. Because you were strong and brave; You, whose lives cold set Like a winter's sun, ill-timed, Whose hearts ran down ere yet The noon of your lives had chimed; You, who in the sun

Of girlbood's smiles were basking, Who left fresh hearts all won-White hands to be had for asking; You, whose bright true faces Are dimmed with clouds of dust, Who hide in gloomy places And cringe in the teeth of rust; Do you know your fathers are here, The wrecks of their pride to meet? Do you know your mothers are here, To throw their hearts at your feet? Do you know the maiden hovers O'er you, with bended knee, Dreaming what royal lovers Such lovers as you would be? Ruins of youthful graces,

Strong hearts crushed in spring. Lift up your phantom faces,
